>>>Update 5-16-2025: Below this line I bracket my new additions with **

Gulf War Illness | Brain Fog | Chronic Fatigue | Occasional Apathy | Depression | ~50 yo Hermit living in poverty

Army Veteran, Patriot Missile Crewmember, mid 90's. Got a nice Southwest Asia Service medal, that they keep sending me free replacements for life (If I don't outlast the United States, which, to be honest, I think I already have done.) Also received a gift that gets bigger every year, Gulf War Illness

Experience:

A. M. Pyrotechnics, LLC: 06/2005 - 03/2012 : This is where I became too ill to continue working

Website admin, computer programming, accounting, music choreography, and research are a few of my duties here. Developed MS Access/ Visual Basic program that handles inventory, ATF logwork, billing, profitability analysis, and updates the JAVA powered online catalog I created via MySQL.

*The database did a lot more than that, like designing rack and mortar layouts for our fireworks shows, calculated blast radius lethality of individual pyro bunkers and displayed graphically, interfaced with FireOne software etc. Wish I still had those skills, sucked when I realized I could no longer follow my own code hehe. Past Me should have been more proud of himself :-) ****

Springfield Public Schools: 08/2003 - 01/2005 :

Performed various custodial duties in a team environment.

I cleaned entire schools, or sections that were about as large as they could make without breaking folk. Had to run around like a daemon every day to finish. I did a good job, in my opinion, though this is the time period in which I started noticing my illness.

TravelNow.com / Hotels.com: 03/2002 - 03/2003 : Answered angry calls all day

Trained new employees, provided software support for multiple departments.

Created a formula using Excel that automatically created HTML links for the affiliate department, saving weeks of labor.

Compiled daily reports of employees incoming call statistics for upper management.

I had to report Hotels.com to the Department of Labor, after alerting them it was illegal to count our 2/day x 15 minute bathroom breaks as an unpaid half hour. They replied they didn't -have- to give us bathroom breaks, and we should be happy. I received hugs from many coworkers when we received our back pay for those breaks. One lady cried. I gave the management many opportunities to rectify, and information to substantiate my claims. Oh well, no cure for stupid I hear, and I am living proof hehe. (I still have all my stupid)

Worldwidelaptops.com: 04/2001 - 12/2001 : My memory gets quite hazy here. Trauma from 9-11? We all hurt.

Purchased, refurbished, and resold laptop computers and provided technical support.

Created an inventory/customer database to track sales and individual computer specifications.

Improved and maintained the website using HTML and CGI scripting.
Handled basic accounting and compiled financial reports.

G&L Auctions: 01/2001 - 03/2001 :

Liquidated art and craft supplies through eBay.com.
Routinely performed accounting, database, and network management tasks.
Big freezing cold abandoned building, like the 5th floor, packed with art supplies and reached by one of those old lever controlled elevators. Wild.

Art2Art.com / CraftClick.com: 12/1999- 12/2000 :

Duties included network administration, customer service, database management and posting online auctions.
Automated many office procedures using HTML and Javascript.
Wrote a computer application using C++ that managed auction sales by querying the inventory database to automatically create HTML/XML upload files.
Tom and his son Russel Murray owned this, and G&L Auctions after Art2Art sold and our branch closed. I guess Tom was involved with POTUS Bush Sr. on some advisory council or some such. He is probably deceased.

Education: ~60 credit hours from SMSU as a computer science major. Kicked out for taking credit for my roommates weed stash, sacrificed myself like J-man I suppose. Dang, past me kinda rocked.

1 year (400+ hours) course in electronics theory and repair at Dallas County Vocational School.

Computing Skills: HTML, CSS, C++, Java, Javascript, Visual Basic, MS Access Former skills, I am a Meat Popsicle now
